Enter the STEM for Britain poster competition for early-career researchers

Congratulations! Get through to the final held at Portcullis House at the Houses of Parliament!

Go Forward 1

Have a panic that you printed your poster the wrong size

Go back 1

Set up your poster and pose for multiple photos, get chatting to fellow poster presenters from all across the country

Arrive at Portcullis House and enter the queue to get through security

Miss 3 turns

Take the early train to London and spend the journey making sure you're clued up on the latest news in your field

Go Forward 1

Have 4 minutes to describe your research to the judges (prominent scientists from across the country)

That was intense!

Go Straight to Coffee and Cake

Have a 10 minute conversation with Helen Pain about your research without realising she is the Deputy CEO of the RSC.....

Speak to a really engaged MP who, it turns out, knows your supervisor!
Small world.

Finish

Take down your poster and say goodbye to the people you have met and find a great exhibition on 'Votes for Women' at the National Portrait Gallery while waiting for your off-peak train.

Prize giving session presented by Stephen Metcalfe MP from the Parliamentary and Scientific Committee and get a shiny certificate for reaching the final.
